Court and Law Officials Dodge

It is even too hot to fight legal battles in the court room. Attorneys and contestants in the litigation have evidenced an inclination to dodge issues in the court.

The case against William McCune, brought by Bernice Tiffin, was stuck off the records of the Janesville municipal court. Settlement was reached out of court and the action dismissed. The defendant was charged with a statutory offense.

The case of the state against James Buchanan, charged with driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor, was held open. Appearance in the case was made by District Attorney S. C. Dunne, and William H. Dougherty, the latter being counsel for the defense.

Buchanan was arrested by County Highway Patrolman Roy Worthington following an automobile accident on the Beloit concrete road.

The action brought against Albert Wollin, charged with unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor is on the court record as being held open for trial.

An adjournment until Thursday was taken Monday afternoon in the civil action suit of William Bull against his former wife, Elizabeth Bull, until next Thursday.

Over in the Rock county circuit court, Judge George Grimm had court during Tuesday afternoon. Divorce actions were to be heard and settlement attempted in several equity cases.

Judge George Grimm has success in settling long standing civil litigation in both the Rock and Grant counties. The Rock county judge was called in to attempt a settlement and was successful in five cases, one of which had been of three years duration.

E. Lorentzen was installed as Noble Grand; John Waldman, vice grand; Wallace Carman, secretary; George Rogers, financial secretary; and Frank Jackman, treasurer.

The Buick car was in the middle of the block after securing gas at the filling station instead of going to the corner. Neither of the drivers was injured.

HERE'S SOME CORN; OVER TEN FEET

All records for corn at this time of the season are believed to have been broken on the Thomas Butters farm who lives out three miles on the Pleasant street road. A stalk of corn is on display in the Gazette window which from the roots to top of tassels is 10 feet 3 inches. Mr. Butters sent it in on hearing of other farmers who claimed the record. He states that he has 10 acres of corn all about the same height.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Editor Gazette:

On Mr. L. A. Gordon's address delivered at the Congressional church this city Sunday afternoon, July 10, Mr. Gordon's address is reported in seven paragraphs. At least six of the seven paragraphs need correction.

Mr. Gordon is reported by the Gazette to have said:

1. "American soldiers polluted the French cities with immorality and wickedness."

2. "There are too many hours given to teaching the children in the schools and too few hours of Bible study works in the church schools."

3. "Boys working their way through college need $150 to buy a dress suit to attend the prom."

4. "He described dancing as the worst activity in this country."

5. "Think of the 7,000,000 soldiers who were shot down in the battlefields of Europe and the 30,000,000 who starved to death as a result."

6. "The Gazette states further: 'L. A. Gordon, Madison, Wis., secretary of state and president of the Young People's League of the Eastern district at the convention of that body Sunday afternoon.'"

The Gazette must stand corrected in the following particulars:

1. It was the Young People's League of the Milwaukee (not Madison) district, and not that of the Eastern district.

2. The paragraph containing the statistics has been lifted out of its context and is relevant to nothing preceding or following.

3. The speaker said the dance is one of the worst institutions in this country.

4. The speaker said: boys working their way through school need $150 dress suits and spend $10 at a single dance.

5. The speaker said: I do not say there are too many hours given to teaching the children in the schools but that too few hours are given to Bible study in the church schools.

6. The speaker said: The French cities were polluted with immorality and wickedness but did not attribute that fact to the American soldier.

Mr. Gordon was a member of the A. E. A. and fought in France. Now with these corrections in at least six of the seven paragraphs of the whole address, the speech is substantially correct as reported.

T. C. THORSON.

An investigation of the statements in the Gazette seem to make it clear that the report made in the Gazette Monday was substantially accurate. The reporter, used to reporting meetings, made many notes. The effort to minimize the statements as to the "something wrong back home" when the soldier was drunk and all that, was reported practically verbatim as stated and not as Mr. Thorson would have it camouflaged and minimized. It is even the way that things look worse in cold type and the speaker grabs the popular method of getting from under by the plea that he has been misunderstood. It is a favorite indoor sport of the loose-tongued and unhappy speaker who makes a "bull" —Editor Gazette.

JANESVILLE FOLK WILL MOVE WEST

Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Burnham, residents of this city for many years, will leave the city Tuesday for Beloit where they will visit at the W. H. Grinnell home until the first part of August. Mr. Grinnell is Mrs. Burnham's brother. From there they will go to Long Beach, Cal., leaving about August 4 to make their home. Mr. and Mrs. James Seebie and family have purchased the home at 803 Hyatt street. Mr. Burnham is a Civil war veteran and was clerk of the board of education for years.

HARDING SPEAKS AGAINST BONUS

scribes President Harding's invitation to a disarmament conference as a "political event of foremost importance" and says:

"If the American president succeeds in carrying his undertaking of a successful conclusion, the nations of the world will have realized the longings of centuries and President Harding will have set up for himself a monument more durable than the dome of St. Peter's."

The Tagblatt believes the status of the United States places her in a favorable position to carry out the conference. It points out that President Harding has seized the opportunity to take the initiative which had almost been lost through Great Britain's suggestion that the Anglo-Japanese pact be made the subject of the proposed conference.

If the proposed conference, the Tagblatt believes, is wisely inspired by American and British naval rivalry, the prevailing tension of the American-Japanese situation and the difficult and complicated issues wrapped up in the Pacific, the newspaper doubts whether a practical solution of the problem will be as simple as it appears in theory.

Doubts Success of Move

It thinks "a self-conscious nation like the United States, with its vast frontage on the Atlantic and the Pacific, will insist on maintaining a formidable navy."

Whether "the combustible spirit" which the American-Japanese relations will prove conducive to the creation of an atmosphere for international discussion of the disarmament issues.

At any rate, says the Times-Zeitung, the Harding's invitation will be received with a valuable index to the attitude of the different nations toward the president's project.

The Vossische Zeitung declares that in resigning Washington, President Harding proposes to avoid the errors made by "his isolated predecessor at Versailles," as both the president and the American delegates then were in a position to meet in close touch with congressional and public opinion.

Toronto, Ont.—Members of the council of states of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater association were guests Tuesday of the city of Toronto.

Harbor facilities were inspected by the council in the morning, while in the afternoon the first of series of lectures regarding the St. Lawrence deep waterway was given aboard the steamer Cape St. Lawrence.

With the aid of maps, Col. W. H. Woollen, United States engineer who, with W. A. Bowden, Canadian engineer, recently completed a survey of the St. Lawrence route, described the project in detail.

Tuesday night the party will call at Rochester, N. Y., to receive greetings of the Chamber of Commerce.

After other business had been transacted the Board adjourned to call on the council. The situation was presented by Francis Grant, chairman of the committee on building. A resolution was presented by Alderman Horn, seconded by Alderman Gibbons that the board be authorized to proceed and let the contracts and that the necessary finance would be furnished by the city. Tractors Battle on Road Every Day Balance of Week

CLUB PLAYS WEEK DAYS MINUS SHOOK AND BIG WILLIAM

Inaugurating their first week as a road team, the Janesville Tractors have booked games for every day of the balance of the week. Here is the way they are lined up:

At Galena, Wis., Tuesday.
At Freeport, Ill., Wednesday.
At Platteville, Wis., Thursday.
At Shullsburg, Wis., Friday.
At Fond du Lac Saturday and Sunday.

Arrangements are being made by Manager George Dorring to endeavor to keep up this sort of work for the balance of the season.

Pitcher Bill Lathrop and Catcher Ray Shook returned to Janesville Sunday night after the two game series at Dubuque, Ia., which the Tractors split. Both these players are unable to remain on the road during the week because of their business needs here.

Only Bill's Second Loss.
Sunday's loss by the locals was only the second out of 20 games this season for Lathrop. At that time White Sox got out seven hits off "Rusty" and drove to a brace of errors might have been held down to one run. The ball park lies in the valley along the river, and it was no secret that the Sox were going to win. Lathrop pitched for five minutes and it was in that stretch that the Iowa outfit reached him.

There is every hope among the ball players that the Janesville Tractor company, under whose name they played in 1920, will be running full steam up next year and that they will then be able to play a full season for the big Keweenaw Motor subsidiary. Practically every one of them is satisfied with the location of Janesville.

RUTH BREAKS JINX AND CHICAGO LOSES; CUBS TRIM GIANTS

There were 13 triples, eight of them in the top notches and five among the minor wheel. Forty-five doubles were smacked, 20 in the majors and 25 in the association.

Fordsons Beat Bankers, 18-16

While "Art" Hager, former city industrial league pitcher, struck out 14 men and allowed but eight hits, the Fordson Tractors were walloping two Bankers pitchers in a wild game won by the Fordsons Monday, 18 to 16. It was a shortest pure and simple. With the score 16 to 2 against them in the fifth, the bankers rallied and slammed McGill until the score was 15 to 12. Hager was then sent in and the money-men managed to slip over only four runs thereafter. "Art" Hager, playing for the Bankers, scored four runs, drove in five, and drew a walk, two doubles and two singles in five trips to the plate. McGill got a homer in the third with the sacks full.

INTERURBAN LET IN FOR COUNCIL ROAST

Condition of Paving After Repairs Starts City on Warpath.

The council expressed its wrath against the Rockford Interurban company for failure to keep faith with the city in the proper upkeep and repair of pavements.

The council ordered that the company be given 10 days to repair the pavement on South Franklin and also where needed on Milwaukee street, and in event they fail to comply with the order, have the work done and charged against the company.

Even Dulin Protests.

"They left South Franklin street in a deplorable condition," said Alderman J. J. Dulin.

"Yes and look at the bumps along the car line on Milwaukee street," said Alderman Jensen.

One course concrete was ordered on South Second street between Ringold and Fremont and on Ringold from Rucker avenue to Racine street.

"You cannot drive on these streets without they are repaired and we would like to have concrete this year," said Leo Atwood, who spoke for the granting of the petition.

Fixing Up Intersections.

"I don't know where we are going to get the money to pay for the intersection," said Mayor Welsh.

Alderman L. D. Horn offered objections to the petition on the claim paving had been refused on Washington street because of the lack of funds to pay the city's share.

"I do not think it fair to authorize paving on these streets when it was refused on other streets," said Alderman Horn.

The petition was passed and the paving ordered.

MYERS THEATER UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

the house on a reserved seat basis. Matinees will be held every day. In the evening only one performance of vaudeville will be staged, a feature picture starting at 7:30. Vaudeville will be put on at 9:30 followed by another showing of the movies, making the closing at about 10:15.

However on Saturday and Sunday nights, vaudeville and movies will be staged each of these evenings.

Redecorate Show House.

In making changes in the interior, complete redecoration will be done, according to the announcement. This will include the lobby. New carpets will be laid, the lobby decorated with better seats. Illumination will be increased. The stage switchboard will be rewired to permit dimmers and the installation of three colored lights, which will be used to bring out the necessary lighting effects. An expert scenic artist will be brought here from Chicago for six weeks to repaint all the present scenery and to create new landscape with illuminated effects. An entirely new stage floor will be put in.

The dressing rooms for actors and actresses will be revamped as will the property rooms. The new rest room will be furnished in attractive and comfortable style with a lady attendant supervising.

Seven-piece Orchestra.

It is 31. Boutin's plan in establishing a first class show house is to have a seven piece orchestra of the best musicians. Overtures would then be featured as in all first rate vaudeville houses as well as music for the stage entertainments.

Following out the scheme of reserving all seats, a sufficient force of ushers would be employed. These, together with doorman and property men, would be uniformed.

Been Long in Show Business.

Mr. Boutin started in the show business by ushering in the Grand Opera house in Peoria, Ill., 25 years ago. From there he went to Springfield, Mass., where he was connected with the old auditorium and the Toff's theatre. In 1904, by that time having made his way to the stage, he organized and built the first musical act in a New England town, and then he came to the American stage and travelled with it for 12 years playing in every principal state and in his time. Besides being owner and manager, he played "soub" in the company.

Came to Samson.

When the war broke out and the play business was hit hard, Mr. Boutin obtained a position with the Milwaukee Steel company at Philadelphia and took up organization work. He was from that time on connected with the Samson company, coming here October 15, 1919. Since being in Janesville, he has been prominent in affairs of the city, and as chairman of the entertainment committee of that organization managed the Outdoor Frolic here two weeks ago.

Raffle Via Ticket Held Law Violation.

Madison—Various schemes being used by Wisconsin organizations to raise money through sale of tickets which give the owner a chance on some prize or other, are declared lotteries and violation of Wisconsin statutes by Attorney General Morgan, in an opinion to Fred V. Heineman, district attorney of Appleton.

The opinion was given on a case at Appleton where the railroad telegraphers propose to have a bill and entertainment, tickets of which call for giving away of the Appleton Junction hotel and real estate valued at $25,000.

"In a general way, any scheme by which any kind of property is disposed of by chance, compensation being paid for such chance, is a lottery," the attorney general held.

"It does not matter that the holder of a chance may receive full value for what he pays. Even if that be the case, the amount he pays is a consideration for the chance, and this holds forth a lure of inducement to improvidence. I think there can be no question but that this scheme is a lottery and prohibited by statute."

THOUSANDS FIND BEACHES PLEASANT

Report of Playgrounds Work to School Board—Miss Ziemann, Clerk.

Mrs. D. W. Holmes, chairman of the playground committee reported to the Board of Education Monday night that $3,372 had been paid out of the playground and beach appropriation of $5,500 July 15. Salaries on beaches will amount to $238.70 for the end of the season Aug. 23 and Playgrounds $1,200.

Repairs on beaches and equipment amounted to $221.11. New equipment bought cost $240.12. This includes two new life boats, 2 life buoys, 4 flags, 6 slides, 15 lockers for boys, island bathhouse and athletic supplies. This allows $22.50 for expenses other than salaries to the close of the playground season.

Requests have been received to have electric lights and telephone service at the beaches but it was not thought advisable to do this this year. At an extra expense of $200 young women assistants have been employed for the playgrounds to conduct the play for the smaller boys and girls and door girls both during the morning and afternoon. The playgrounds will not remain open evenings as it was found upon a week's trial that 99 per cent of the people who used the grounds in the evenings were the ones who played there during the daytime.

Attendance at the playgrounds for the first eight days this year compared with actual figures totals 3,222 people and 4,000 at the two beaches.

The bill of Brown Brothers for electrical work which, after experts had investigated and declared the bill too high, was not paid as full was gone over again by experts from the Janesville electric company and on their report that the bill was $1,000, Mr. Grant recommended that the deduction be paid, which was passed.

It was voted to allow Supp. Frank Holt $25.00 per month for the use of his car on business.

Miss Ziemann, Acting Clerk

Pending the selection of a clerk to succeed S. C. Burnham, who terminated his services July 1, the board appointed Miss Lydia Ziemann as acting clerk. Miss Ziemann reported $18,010.23 in the school treasury and $801,055.43 in the new high school building fund. Bills amounting to $11,161 and playgrounds of $1,372.49 were ordered paid.

Commissioner Hemming reported considerable carpentry work done in the Adams, Jackson and Garfield schools. On his recommendation it was voted to have pipes installed to furnish a larger supply of water to the Adams and Grant schools where the present pipes have proved inadequate.

The commissioners felt that a good deal could be saved on water bills at the schools if new meters were installed and they accepted a proposition of the city water department to install new meters for $150.

Supt. Frank Holt reported that all but three teachers had been hired for the schools here next year. The following is the list of high school teachers and their salaries, already engaged:

L. S. Lamoreaux, Music, $2,100; manual training, $2,100; Miss Vera Hough, Janesville, science, $1,500; Miss Marjorie Holtzman, Berlin, French, $1,500; Miss Rosetta Williams, Janesville, commercial, $1,400; Miss Eunice Nelson, Edgerton, history, $1,400; Miss Averil Brown, Janesville, mathematics, $1,200; Thomas McDonald, Muskego, general science, $2,500; Miss Wilfred S. Gabeook, Cumberland, head of English Dept., $1,800; Miss Louise Parker, Clinton, English, $1,500; Miss Hazel Stroudman, Ashland, commercial, $1,400; Miss Katherine Nelson, Twin Bluffs, domestic science, $1,250. Teachers of last year re-engaged are Miss Rachel Keweenaw, $1,800; Miss Edith Sturges, $1,500; and Miss Lillian Venable, $1,800. Grade school teachers, all at $1,200 per year are: Miss Sigrid Malmgren, Ruth Kamlien, Florence Bluebrod; Laura Frihart, Irene Orton, Dorothy Oviatt, Marie Potter, and Ruth Nyman. Miss Rachel Keweenaw will receive $1,250 per year.

POLICEWOMAN IS DEPUTIZED FOR WORK

A Janesville police woman was deputized during the meeting of the council. A resolution was passed to make Margaret J. Kavanaugh and Walter Seidmore, deputy police officers. The appointment was approved by the council without an objection or word of argument.

TIME FOR THIS SORT OF THING TO END.

Gen. Pershing has said over and over that no army of men ever was organized with so high a morale as the A. E. F. The greatest surgeons and medical men of the world have stated in articles, in interviews in public prints and journals, repeatedly that the American army was the cleanest ever organized. It was the wonder of the French marshals and received the unstinted praise of the British. In France where the American Expeditionary force was billeted and camped, where it fought and died and where it came into contact with the people in life and received its tears and tribute to death, the people remember with pleasure the boys from the United States. And yet with all this testimony and all this official knowledge available here comes a would-be teacher and leader, who holds the post of an assistant secretary of state of the state of Wisconsin and tells an audience of intelligent people and a body of young folks gathered in the name of the Lord and of Truth and Justice, that these men were drunk and disgraced the name of America.

Whether he did it in the heat of oratory, or in the cold, dispassionate discussion of the questions before him, the man who made such statements disgraced the place in which he spoke, and insulted the people who were perforce obliged to listen. He fills the bill of Eliphaz the Temanite, who in the Book of Job, speaks of the man who "fills his belly with the east wind and reasons with unprofitable talk."

Mr. Gordon is unfit to occupy a position in a state office unless it be that the very attitude he assumes is the general attitude of the administration of which he is a part. He deserves the most stinging rebuke and in the future, when he is called upon to speak on any occasion, should be met with the contumely which he has invited. Where he hails from or where he is going—and it is said he was across the ocean in the service—is of no matter. He is not adding to his glory by insulting the army that saved the world from military tyranny, nor adding the cause of morality for which he attempts to speak.

There is still some whitewash left at Leipsic for other German soldier criminals.

WE ARE TO HAVE THE RIGHT KIND OF A HIGH SCHOOL.

Action of the Board of Education Monday and the support of the city council in approving of the plans for a high school building that will be a great credit to the city, will meet with the universal approbation of the public.

That the school is not to be skimped to fit a few dollars and that it is to have the arrangement providing complete education of the student—the body as well as the mind—is gratifying to the friends of the youth of Janesville. There is greater hope for the future. When completed the high school will represent what last year would have cost over a million of dollars. It is worth the price for what it means to the people of the city and Rock county too, and all this section which cannot help but be influenced by the action here.

The Board of Education has worked diligently and in a most business-like manner against many obstacles and odds, and patiently goes forward to see the first fruition of its labor. The vote of confidence of the citizens of Janesville in their action is forecast in the support of the city council which unanimously accepted the plans presented by the board.

Those Ulster Irish lost no time in fighting up to the truth. "One paring shot and I'll be on my way."

Let's get Jan Smuts over here to settle our railroad problem.

PLANTING TREES ON HIGHWAYS.

Planting trees along the highways in memory of the soldier dead of the nation is growing in favor. We have a splendid place to begin on the Beloit road. The objection that it would add to the snow difficulty does not seem to be enough to keep back the program. Other important highways are being planted to trees—one of the most attractive being the cement road from Eau Claire to Chippewa Falls, about the same distance as is the Janesville-Beloit road and connecting cities of slightly less population. The Kiwanis club has the matter in hand and acting with the Beloit club should have no difficulty in carrying through this part of the program. The aid of the county should be enlisted in the matter generally in saving all the trees and preserving shade and beauty.

The Debility of the Foreign Trade

By FREDERICK J. HASKIN

Washington, D. C.—Disarrangement of foreign exchange rates as an aftermath of the war is admitted by financial authorities to be one of the greatest ills to be cured or at least improved before the world can be restored to normalcy. Domestic and foreign business are so closely allied that both must be considered together. Much of the business depression of which constant complaint has been made can be traced directly to the fact that all foreign monies are at a discount in relation to American dollars. Turning it around and looking at the situation from the point of view other than American, a premium must be paid to buy American dollars. Experts of the government are of the belief that the greatest evil with which business has to contend in this foreign exchange situation is the fluctuation of values of foreign monies in relation to American gold. A purchase made abroad, to be paid for in 90 days, may find a material change in the exchange rate which makes the purchase cost either considerably more or considerably less than was bargained for. The net result of this has been to encourage gambling and speculation, buying goods with the intent that when the time came to pay for them, the cost in American money would be less.

In the present situation, the nations whose money is depressed in value are not the only sufferers. The United States, whose money is at a premium, is hurt very badly, too. Foreign business men cannot afford to pay for American goods on the basis of American money values. This materially cuts down the export of American goods, which in turn reacts on the amount of production, and works on down the line so there is an overplus of labor, and prices and wages are forced down, too, by the operation of the law of economics known as supply and demand.

Foreign nations with their money depreciated, look to other nations with the money standard is not so high to supply their needs. As an illustration suppose that France is in the market for a lot of wheat. The United States could supply this wheat, and so could Argentina. The price asked, let us say, is $2 a bushel in each case. However, the money of Argentina being at a discount of about 50 per cent compared to the American dollar, the Argentine price means that France can get the wheat it desires from Argentina at what would amount in American money to $1.70. Naturally, this business goes to the South American republic.

Hundreds of "cures" for this situation have been advanced by theorists, but all of them are rejected by Government experts. Officials of the federal reserve board know that the age of inflation is past, and caution against expanding a sudden snapping back to normal conditions throughout the world today. Tomorrow, next month, or next year, the restoration will be gradual and slow. Some European nations will never again reach the point where their standard of money will have the value it did before the World War. The situation can best be benefited only when the countries of Europe stop quarreling and fighting among themselves and settle down to hard work and saving. There have been cases where the nations have instead of trying to help each other, have helped themselves, have apparently been bent on cutting each other's economic throats. The parcelling out of Europe into many new nations has given rise to much of this sort of thing. For instance, integral parts of the old Austro-Hungarian empire have been prime offenders. For a long time Hungary would allow none of its wheat to go to Austria. In return for Austria refusing to let its manufactured goods, needed by Hungary, reach that country. The Hungarians could not get the clothing and machinery they needed. The Austrians could not get the food they needed. The situation benefited no one and hurt both countries and all other countries with which they have to have dealings.

It has often been proposed that the United States government take a big sponge and wipe clean the slate on which are chalked down the debts of foreign nations to the United States. These debts are owed to us by our late allies. Governmental experts are inclined to look on this suggestion with the idea that it would do little or no good. It would mean cutting down the financial obligations of certain foreign nations but these experts say that unless the common citizen of those lands benefited, it would do no good. For instance, if forgiving the French debt to the United States were accomplished, the French would follow a lessening of the tax burden on the French people. Unless the United States government could dictate how this should be done, there would be no surety that the ameliorated taxes would help the ordinary French citizen, or that the value of the French franc would be appreciated.

Also, it has been said the limit of taxation on many foreign countries has been reached. If this is true, and these countries cannot now pay even the interest on their debt to the United States, wiping the slate clean would accomplish no good.

Some of the countries partaking of German reparations have suggested that, in exchange for their obligations to the United States, the American government accept the German bonds which some of our late allies held. In support of this idea, it is brought forward that by France, for instance, holding German bonds, and America holding French bonds, it just makes an exchange of the obligations to the United States. Germany would be able to pay the interest due, and the principal of this obligation in time, but because of the situation which arose out of the peace conference.

By returning French bonds to Paris, for instance, and taking the equivalent in German obligations which France now holds, it would, it is feared, put the United States in much the same position as it had joined the League of Nations, look, stock, and barrel.

has been traveling through Ohio, calls attention to the many trees being planted by the farmers along the highways there. These are placed just inside the fences and in position to act as a part of the boundary of land and a shade for the roads. Long stretches of the highways are thus planted and eventually will be popular drives for the tourist. There seems to be no objection on the part of anyone as to the future condition of the road or that there will be drifting snow. Everyone knows now, when driving along the highways of this section of the state on a hot day, what a relief it is to reach a shady place where the farmers have not cut out the trees. We need more miles of such road.

An anonymous letter writer wants to know of the Gazette why it does not say something about the gambling laws. He mentions card rooms, pool rooms and games "just for fun" and the baseball pool. What we say to this man is that our police are like love, blind.

STATISTICS
Ninety per cent of the people want to go to the South Sea Islands. The modern books written about them are the cause. These are the days when a bachelor with a motor car has the feminine world at his command. Scenarios for the "movies" are so easily written that 40 per cent of the population are doing in the movies. The bureau wishes to state that it has found that artists are just as moral as other human beings. There was a time in our clubs when you could push a bell and ask your friends what they would have. When you signed the check it amounted to eighty cents. After that they were of the mental caliber to organize a league of nations, take entire command of an army or reorganize the entire social system. Those who were poor became rich, and those who were miserly became generous. The easiest thing to find was a subject of conversation and the atmosphere was so friendly and warm. The only bell you hear in a club today is the bell in the church not far away. You feel as though some poor chap was being taken to his last resting place. To become animated during a conversation makes your fellow members suspicious that you are a fake. It is easier to get up in the morning. Breakfast with bright eyes is the new slogan.

PROF. STEINBRUGGE SAYS:
Scientists and professors do not always agree about the theory of heredity. Some claim that characteristics and qualities are the direct result of environment; others that we inherit our traits from our parents. The young man who inherits $200,000 often goes to the devil because he is a victim of both theories. The money inherited and the environment is created by the "jinks" he meets in life who help him spend it.

Who's Who Today

JUDGE JULIAN MACK

Judge Julian W. Mack of Chicago, long prominent in Jewish circles, has been named permanent chairman of the Palestine Development association, recently formed by many of the members of the Zionist organization of America for purpose of establishing industrial and agricultural enterprises in Palestine. Judge Mack is a lawyer and jurist of national repute. Born in San Francisco, Cal., in 1866, he was educated in the public schools of his native city, and at Harvard, from which university he secured an L. L. D. degree in 1887. During the three years following his graduation from Harvard he studied at the universities of Berlin and Leipzig.

On returning to the U. S. in 1890, Mack was admitted to the bar. In 1895 he became a professor of law in Northwestern University, remaining there seven years. In 1902 he took a position on the law faculty of the University of Chicago. He was elected to the position of judge of the Cook county, Ill., circuit court, a position he held until 1911, when he was appointed to head the newly created U. S. commerce court. On this court he has since served with distinction.

Judge Mack is identified with many philanthropic organizations, and has taken a very prominent part in the Zionist movement. In politics he is a Democrat.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

The Real Downhearted Ones.

A woman may become a farmer's wife for love of the man; not for love of the life farmers' wives too often lead. Overworked and not even given a little sympathy, farmers' wives have in heart the real oppressed class in America for generations.

Traditions of that kind are common to most of us, for the family history of most of us leads back to the soil. Downright today as it ever was, about as common as the telephone, the automobile and the phonograph have taken away some of the old heart-breaking loneliness.

Here is a present day case, possibly a little extreme. Ohio farmer, suing for divorce, outlines what he considers the "reasonable duties" of a farm wife as follows:

Run the farmstead in all details; take care of the children; milk the cows morning and night; run the milk through the separator (a buck breaking job comparable with washing); put the cream in the cans for the creamery's collector; feed the calves and pigs; plant the garden; plant and hoe the potatoes; put corn and hay in the horses' stalls noon and night; do chores incident to the business of farming; and help in the fields with planting and weeding.

The divorce petition alleges the wife is quarrelsome "and that she did bite him on the hand in a very unprovoked manner." (The state would like to see a picture of the state.)

When farmers realize that milking and caring for livestock are no rightful part of a woman's duties (though nine out of ten directly love gardening) that modern conveniences in the house are as necessary as modern machinery in the fields and that a farmer's wife has quite as much use for a hired girl as he for a hired hand, divorce will appeal to women.—El Paso, Tex., Herald.

LOOKING BACKWARD

FORTY YEARS AGO

July 12, 1881.—Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones passed through this city today and promised friends to preach at the All Souls church Sunday. This is the church of which he was pastor for a while. The country here was not so thickly settled as the country of the county is now. They are now being taken care of at Madison, the county paying $1.50 per day for each of the 16 persons. If the county would instead of ten dollars a week, pay $1.50 for each one taken care of, no objection was taken on the matter but it is thought that something will come of the meeting.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

July 12, 1901.—The trip to Chicago via the Janesville and Southeastern railroad can now be made in two hours and 15 minutes.—A number of doctors from Chicago were in the city yesterday looking over the Burr Leitch property and testing the water and were all pleased with the idea of starting a sanitarium and bottling the water there.

TEN YEARS AGO

July 12, 1911.—A long wave is sweeping all over the country. In ten days in New York, 22 have died of the heat and in other states according to their size.—Forest fires in the northern part of Wisconsin and Michigan are destroying much property and several lives. Five dollars has been raised for weekly band concerts by the Bower City band.

WISHING THE PATIENT UNHAPPY DAYS

The cheerless disposition which goes with suppression of displacement of abdominal organs, and which we have glorified here under the name of splenic anhedonia, is too frequently accompanied by bulimic tendencies. This may be a woman who has been lashed upon a sea of trouble by the bad news that her right kidney was loosened about its capsule and was hanging about the abdomen, whereas the doctor kept his discovery to himself the poor woman might have been quite contented and happy. If any one daily laments for a suppurating abscess of the liver, or a woman can be quite contented with this side of heaven.

Likewise with prolapsed stomach, placed liver, sagging colon and all the rest of the horrible contents—it is no fault of the patient but the discovery of such loose organs to the nation except when this information is necessary for the purpose of the cooperation by the patient in the carrying out of remedial measures, such as absolute bed rest, postural maneuvers, exercises appropriate to the individual requirements, feeding on some such artificial support or surgical interference.

X-ray pictures have proved that most adults have more or less sagging of stomach contents, and the position of the abdominal organs are compared with our older conceptions of the normal positions of the organs. It follows, therefore, that a diagnosis of splenic anhedonia is not worth considering. Faulty interpretations of X-ray pictures by mere X-ray technicians without critical and expert experience have caused too many patients, but nowadays about the only victims of this mechanical kind of "diagnosis" are those who believe that they can go over the doctor's head and administer to their own. Precious few of us would fail to find our inwards more or less displaced or "dropped" if we were to rely on mere X-ray evidence. A great deal of our modern "specialists" ought to be sent back to honest general practice, and at least four-fifths of the X-ray diagnosticians that infest the country should be sent back to their original work, such as half-soling shoes.

DISARMAMENT IS ALL PARAMOUNT

Harding's Call for Conference
Greatest Event of Present Century.

By DAVID LAWRENCE.
Copyright 1921, by Janesville Gazette.
Washington—Disarmament moves in strange ways. It wanders to perform, and the various steps that have led up to the calling at last of a disarmament conference of the nations known as the principal allies and associated powers are a peculiar mixture of sensitiveness on the one hand and hesitancy on the other to assume responsibility for the success of admittedly important and difficult international problems of modern times.

Great Britain has from the start wanted a disarmament conference as a means of reducing her tax expense, but on the one hand she was faced with an element that looked askance at the mere mention of reducing the size of the British navy and on the other hand she was bound to go along with Japan because of the delicate matters involved in the Anglo-Japanese alliance. A proposal by England would have to be seconded by France. Now the situation has been somewhat reversed. A great point is made of the fact that the president of the United States issued the call for a disarmament conference. England is not in the position of having forced the issue though if the truth were told, she was eager in private to have America make the move and she managed to maneuver things around so as to go into the conference without any special responsibility for compelling agreement. It is one thing to call the conference and another to conduct it. That conference as mediator with a certain degree of mediating interest in what is going on. The United States becomes more or less the arbiter in the dispute and Great Britain would prefer to have it that way. That is not all, however. Tied up with the disarmament problem is something else besides naval expenditure. It touches the League of Nations as an instrument for preservation of peace in the absence of large armaments or some other international body able to accomplish a similar result. Then, too, there are the big financial questions—the payment of war debts—which sooner or later touch the disarmament problem. America as a creditor nation and similarly as the creditor nation of the world, with a big navy and with no special interests or ambitions except the peace of the world is courted as a greater moral force in a disarmament conference than ever before. There have been international conferences on armament questions before. The last was held at The Hague as well as at the famous London conference of 1909 but no single power had then as much influence as the United States has today. This of course is because the United States used her power in the world war—unwisely and disastrously.

The success of the disarmament conference called by President Harding depends on the formula laid down upon something entirely different—the readiness of the powers involved to agree upon a program of peace that will remove sources of friction and possible war. Everybody admits that the chances of war in Europe are remote for a generation to come—the financial and physical resources of Europe are too exhausted for any war to erupt in the near future. But there are war clouds in the Pacific. Japan and the United States have delicate issues at stake and so have various British dominions like Australia and Canada and New Zealand.

The British Empire and the United States must clear the Pacific of possible trouble before there can be any progress toward disarmament. Accordingly the conference summoned by Mr. Harding is a reality a concrete step toward peace—an effort to preserve peace by going at the roots of trouble while there is still time and not when the passions of the peoples are inflamed by an untoward incident.

Senator Borah's resolution has been a contributing factor toward the bringing about of the big conference. At the same time the president has gone much further. He has not limited the meeting to Great Britain, Japan and the United States as the Japanese senator wished. He has asked Italy and China to join the former because she is a member of the supreme council and the latter because much of the trouble in the Pacific relates to the commercial rights of Japan and other foreign governments, including Italy.

In a nutshell the significant statement issued here explaining the relationship between the disarmament conference and a discussion of the problems of the far east is an official admission that Japan must be reckoned with. For many months it has been apparent that Europe and the United States were ready for a peace of limiting armaments but the Japanese were hesitant. Naturally they would be when there are so many unsettled questions in the far east—all the way from the Chinese border to the Pacific and the difficulties over equality of commercial opportunity.

The big conference has been called, however. That means much. But like the Irish peace conference, it is too early to be overconfident of results. The biggest task is still ahead—tailoring the peace of Versailles and still unaccomplished—namely bringing the whole world into agreement on a program of preserving peace so as to make armament unnecessary.

Kills Brother, Sits on Porch Awaiting Police

Kenosha.—Herman Marrow, 31, sat quietly down on the porch to wait for the police after killing his brother and chasing the latter's wife around the house, firing two shots at her which missed.

The trouble is said to have arisen from a quarrel between the two men, which started the previous evening and was renewed in the morning. The dead man, Jack Marrow, was the father of two children.

When the ambulance and patrol arrived a few minutes after the shooting, they found the slayer taking things quietly. He refused to divulge the cause of the quarrel, but is believed by his friends to be insane.

About three years ago he was prevented from committing suicide through the prompt use of a stomach pump.

One night Barney McCool decided to entertain a small and select gathering of poker players in his little place. There was a definite reason for this. Barney was there because his definite refusal would have thrown him into a state of depression from which a derelict could hardly have freed him. Delaney was there because he was never very far from anything which looked like gambling. Bill Buck, the miner, the Cavendish, and Eddie Farnum, the cashier of the bank were there, for they enjoyed a riotous time wherever it was to be found.

The game had started tolerably enough, but as the hours passed, since settled over the little group. It was Delaney who sapped the sport from the game and reduced it to a calculating one. Delaney had been a gambler from the time he was a boy. For each man had begun to feel a resentment toward his companions, to suspect that they were banded against him just as he was banded with them against Delaney. Delaney had settled himself to the business of protecting his own with an earnestness which was almost savage.

Delaney, who preferred a warm, black to a lively, had chosen a seat in front of the stove. He presented a semblance of slenderness, wearing but three sweaters, and these very thin ones, under a wine-colored velvet jacket.

He was a very tall man a little over medium height and giving an impression of delicacy and breeding. He had pale yellow hair which he constantly smoothed with the palms of his hands. A Van Dyke beard gave to his colorless face a look of asceticism. His movements were quick, at times to jerkiness, and he had a normally long finger were never they had the effect of exploring into everything, as an insect feels its way with sensitive antennae. He arranged his cards in a line with only one tip of the corner visible in an incredibly short space of time; then, his eyes darted to the faces of his companions as though trying to read in them the story of each hand. When he dealt, it seemed almost as though he hoped to gain a knowledge of the spots through the tips of his fingers. Cavendish and Farnum sat beside him; the former was an Englishman in his early twenties, who months ago had overthrown Dawson's prejudice against the "romantic man" and who was a typical example of the man who made the northwest United States a unique in the history of law and order.

He was a careless player, too careless for poker. He held his cards loosely and sat so that, by passing his hand over his stomach, Delaney could look directly into his hand. His whole attitude expressed the thought: "But my dear man, why play with me? I would have scorned to stoop to trickery in the winning of a game."

His usually brilliant color was heightened by excitement, and he touched his cheeks impatiently every now and then as though worked at by a burning heat. He lost without venom but with a hint of contempt as though the struggle were not quite worth while. He might have been thinking: "If I had you men on the Rucky field, I would soon put you in your places."

Farnum was stocky at his slenderest moments, but, protected from the Yukon cold, he looked something like a turtle when its head protrudes beyond its shell. He was the sort of man who, winning or losing, explained his play, much to the annoyance of the others at the table. You might have thought I was crazy to hold two queens, John and nine spot," he would say, "but I reasoned that my chances were." It pleased him to be considered an immensely subtle player.

'THE GIRL WHO HAD NO CHANCE'

By Marion Rubincam

CHAPTER LXXXI.

HOME EXCITEMENT

When Ruth said "Come in" a very efficient looking young woman stepped into the room. She had brown eyes and hair and was dressed in a rather smart plain dress. "I am Miss Vance, the official guide and shopper for guests at the hotel," she said, coming over to the couch where the girl sat.

Ruth asked her to sit down. She looked at her curiously—she was such a businesslike person. She was exactly the sort Ruth had always wanted to be herself, had she the chance. "We want to see you and studying for a business career. She had alert ways, intelligent eyes, and a crisp voice and manner.

"You wanted some shopping done and you aren't familiar with our store?"

"But I want to go myself," Ruth objected.

"It can be managed either way. If you don't mind, I will do it for you—the hotel employs me for just that purpose. But it's always better to make your own selections. Now, shall we make a list of what you want?"

"I want everything," Ruth said suddenly. Then laughed, for her answer sounded so odd.

Miss Vance smiled too, a quick smile. She never took time to smile long, she was always moving about doing something.

"They made a list, and Ruth told her about what she thought she could spend.

"I will advise one very smart dress from one of the exclusive places, then you'll be ready for any event," Miss Vance said when Ruth told her of a dinner she had to attend the following week.

"And the price?"

"Well, about $200. Yes," as Ruth looked up quickly. "You see, it's the beginning of the season and the dress is high. We'll economize in other ways."

The girl remembered Langley's note on the margin of her typewritten instructions about not saving money on the dress. She had been appointed to the professional shopper, told her the whole story, and asked her advice.

Miss Vance seemed to understand perfectly—was always understanding. And presently in the car the hotel took for Ruth by the week they were spinning up Fifth Avenue together.

Langley came first—Ruth and then there was a long drive. After that she had several thousand dollars, her expenses paid, why should she not buy these things? So she began choosing things rapidly, only taking Miss Vance's advice when the dress was such a good one as to be better than imitation, and that heavy crepe de chine laundered more easily than sheaf stuff.

Ruth remembered she was wearing only plain things of a half bleached muslin when her mother had made. So she put off choosing dresses, and bought herself silk stockings and shoes and slippers, loading up her waiting car.

So an exciting morning passed. At 1 o'clock they went to the hotel. Ruth, her cheeks burning and her eyes bright from the sheer, feminine pleasure of a wealth of pretty things, bathed and changed to some of the lovely things chosen that morning. She even slipped on her new shiny pumps and silk hose, and after eating alone, she met Miss Vance and they went to the city.

"You can wear it any number of times," the shopper said.

They went into a place where heavy gray velvet curtains deadened the noise of the street, where Futurist designs were used to please the eyes of customers bored with the conventional enamel panelling. Ruth did not know what she wanted.

She remembered the name of Myra's dress. "Does Miss Emily Platter buy here?" she asked.

"Oh yes, she buys here a lot. She's married now, though her woman agent said she should have something youthful, simple—a debutante frock."

Ruth gave herself up to it. She let them sell her a soft silk evening frock with a puffy skirt and garlands of silk roses, and a not dress that blazed in the most delightful way.

She asked for a simple street dress, and was sold a blue serge with an odd trimming of jade color beads and a black sash that had red collar and cuffs of ermine and a real lace vest.

She inquired about suits and finally chose one whose smart lines she could not resist, with great bands of gray velvet on the cuffs and lapels.

Her bill staggered her. But after all, she had chosen the frocks, so she paid for them.

"And not bad. They allowed you a little off because you bought a lot," Ruth paused before a window of another shop. Flaming in its mirrored interior was a gown, a simple black satin that had red collar and cuffs of ermine and a real lace vest.

"I want that," Ruth said recklessly. And she went in and bought it, seeing only its exquisitely simple lines and the fact that it was the same as the one she had seen when she tried it on.

"Hats! Miss Vance exclaimed. "I'm nearly out of money."

"Never mind, I know a cheap little place where they have very smart things."

So Ruth, when she took Miss Vance to the theatre that evening, was one of the best dressed figures in the hotel.

BEAUTY CHATS

ANSWERED LETTERS

A Victim—There is no such remedy. Why should you want to move freckles from a child's face? It shows that she has plenty of iron in her blood and no doubt she is robust because of it. Freckles can only be reached and this must be done by sunbathing, and this appears again in a few days. To subject a child to any treatment for a supposed blemish, would only mean to make her self-conscious and either a vain, uncomfortable about her appearance.

Minkins—Very short hair can be styled by dividing it into small strands and turning each portion into a small circle, much like the hair on a pompadour. The paper is placed under the curl, then folded over it like an envelope, leaving only enough space required to form the circle.

Anxious—If your complexion is clear, grey will be becoming to you, but you can wear it anyway by adding any color that suits you. Your best colors are shades of brown and blue and the rich autumn leaf colors, such as henna, red, orange, yellow, and any pastel color as a contrast to your dark type.

C. L. C.—Never use cocoa butter on the face, as you say that you have a tendency to grow hair. This is excellent for other parts of the body as it is very nourishing. Massage it into the skin as you do with a cream until the skin takes up as much as it needs. For your dry skin, use a fine cream generously. This should be made from the best ingredients, such as almond oil.

C. H. H.—You are about five pounds above the average for your age and height. As children grow in such irregular ways, there can be no set standard of weight for a certain age. Often they have a lapse of several years in which there seems to be no growth; then there is a sudden tendency in this direction and they make up for the apparent lost time.

N. G. G.—The article is a patented mixture and I do not know what it contains. If your hair is too dry, it shows that your scalp is not secreting enough oil to keep the hair in good health. Massage it every night with any powder that you like, which will take away that chippy look and keep it quite short. The style of wearing the hair must be just right, or it is ugly. It is usually trimmed once or twice a month, as needed.

Lion and Mouse

Two men scurried on foot at breakfast time down Bright Angel Trail into the mile-deep abyss of Grand Canyon. An hour later a party of 50 men and women on muleback were riding the trail. They were the members of the party. Then they'd send back for us—but it will be too late for you to make the 8 o'clock train. And you won't attend the California Hotel Corporation's meeting tomorrow in time to prevent Rodney having himself elected president.

"You—what did this?"

"Rodney and I. We decided your selfishness had gone far enough and thing. For another, I think it is wrong that you should take all credit and glory for his work. Also, he has been my husband for the past two months. I am ready to resign whenever you say so, Mr. Wayne.

Wayne was alternately reddening and purpling.

"I'll have to congratulate Rodney—day after tomorrow," he said.

"Yes," said the other. "My wife has just been here and it tickles them to death to see somebody boss me around."

"So the spider, my son, spinning its web," said the instructive parent to his small son, "is not wonderful, or you might say, it is not so wonderful that web, no matter how hard he might try?"

"Well, what of it?" replied the up-to-date offspring. "Watch me spin this top. No spider can do that, no matter how hard he might try."

Pupils in a primary grade recently were instructed to develop their powers of observation, as well as their descriptive ability, by a series of "Human Nature Observations." As the course was called, they were told to keep their eyes open for interesting happenings of a human nature character and report at school. When they were called on to give their observations, Elizabeth, 6 years old, reported as follows: "Last night I was walking through Commercial park, and I saw a young man and a girl sitting on a bench. The girl was looking at the man's head and was very interesting."

"Why should you do this for him?" "Because I admire him, for one thing."

"You should not eclipse his work any longer. This was our chance—to get him the presidency of this California murder he organized so successfully for you."

Wayne looked at her fiercely. "I will confess to you that I hired two men to turn her into a lion and a mouse."

"You should not eclipse his work any longer. This was our chance—to get him the presidency of this California murder he organized so successfully for you."

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON.

Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a man of 24 and have been going with a girl 21 years of age. We have gone together about six months and I love her dearly.

We were going to get married and now her folks will not consent to it. I believe her folks have something against me, but what it is I don't know. She listens to them.

I want her and love her. What can I do? JACK H.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am married to a "soul killer," a man 15 years my senior. He has almost driven me insane at times with his sneering contempt for anything of interest to me. He will do and say things when alone that he knows annoy me. Then when I break down from overstrain of nerves, he walks out of the door with a slam, to laugh at the effect on me.

When I came from New York and met him he was such a willing church man, whose wife was a low character, and caused him the loss of all he had. Now I have found, step by step, that he has been the most deceitful man of 65, and the rankiest liar I ever met. His wife was a lovely woman who raised a family of little ones. After he deserted her, instead of buying them bread, he bought presents for me and denied his children.

Please warn young women against the wiles of old men who are so "sensitive." This one drove his wife to the refuge of others and he tries to work on my nerves so I will go wrong. Never!

I think I should leave him and find a younger man who is left with a little boy and girl to raise. Where we could all grow together and aim high. My husband sits for days without a cheerful look. I fix everything good to eat, even all I can, but what for? I wait and wait for one word of joy and cheer, one word of interest in things I like. Hell has no fury like the glare of hate from an old man who hates a younger woman. Should I go back to New York and work?

FARMERS TESTIFY ON CONDITIONS

Others Too Are Heard in Farm Bureau Investigation Here.

Agriculture interests of Rock county had an inning Monday afternoon during hearings conducted by County Agent R. T. Chassee and Farm Bureau Secretary C. E. Culver in the court house. Men familiar with farm problems were called in to testify for information to be used by the national federation of Farm Bureaus before the joint Congressional hearings in Washington, D. C.

Every man that testified declared that the price obtained by farmers for farm products was out of proportion to the price that the farmer had to pay for his necessities. For food, clothing, stock feed, down to agriculture implements.

Farmers declared that they had lost money, or barely broken even, during the last year. "Only a hungry thing" was the way several of the witnesses expressed farm financial problems.

Reduce Freight Rates. The pertinent facts detailed during the hearing for a satisfactory readjustment were:—reduction in freight rates; legislation to aid agriculture such as the truth in labeling bill; laws prohibiting substitutes of farm products, such as tinned milk, of the use of substitute butter and milk products; lower interest rates; reduction of retail prices and better marketing.

All witnesses agreed that Rock county with its diversified farming was better off than the average community and that Rock county banks had been liberal in granting credits when credits were deserved.

Farm Organization. A better farm organization was urged by nearly every person who testified, and many of the men questioned were not interested in any farm organization or membership. The main grip of expressed was the extreme variation in what the farmer gets for his wool and what the merchant gets for a garment, for what the farmer gets for his shoes and what the shoe dealer now asks for shoes, the farmer gets for beef and pork and the price demanded at the butcher shops.

Three farmers told that hides were not worth skinning costs and yet shoes were from $10 to $20 a pair. "That is not reasonable nor fair to the farmer," said J. D. Clark of Milton, a retired farmer.

Reduce Retail Prices. In all testimonials, high freight rates were blamed as one of the prime evils of the adverse farm problem. Next it was demanded that retail stores reduce prices, or make demands upon the manufacturer to lower prices, to have the finished goods in proportion to the price on farm products.

Farmers claimed that the market and price for farm products was not alone governed by supply and demand. Speculators and manipulators were blamed for juggling the prices around and it was contended that the middleman realized more profits off farm goods than does the producer.

"I do not believe that the price of the things that the farmer buys has been reduced to a level of what the farmer gets for his produce but that that situation is only temporary," said Frank Jackman, Janesville banker.

County Well Off. Both Mr. Jackman and A. C. Gaarder from Rock county bankers were obtaining reasonable credit. "Rock county is better off than the average county from every standpoint," said Mr. Gaarder. "However, even Rock county farmers are in a serious plight and like every other farm district not getting an adequate return on their farm labor or investment."

"There is too much of a spread between what the farmer gets for selling his stock, grain and wool and what the consumer pays for the finished products," said Mr. Edward H. Parker, noted swine breeder and farmer. "I did not make a cent last year and estimate I will be lucky if I break even, and that is the general situation among the farmers."

Many Testify. The farmer is discouraged and not prosperous under present conditions," said A. B. West, agriculture instructor at the Janesville high school. "I believe in the farmer for it means co-operation, economy and believe that the farmer should have unrestricted privileges of organization, the establishing of warehouses, to hold his produce and reduced freight rates. The farm products must move on the market in order to have prosperity in the nation."

Losses on tobacco were reported by growers. Live stock shippers reported reduced freight rates alone would enable them to realize a reasonable profit. Witnesses declared farmers were entitled to a fair interest on the capital invested and pay for their work.

"They are not getting that now," said Karl Megeheisen, Rock Prairie minister.

Those who testified were W. J. Clark, farmer, Frank Jackman, Harold Ward, Bernard McLaughlin, A. C. Gaarder, Colon Rice, Edward Parker, M. S. Kellogg, Allan D. West, Karl Megeheisen, Robert Hadden and J. D. Clark.

PROF. KOLING JOINS PHANTOM LAKE STAFF; NOTES OF THE CAMP

Prof. Koling of the Butts School of mines has been added to the supervisors of the Phantom lake camp of the Y. M. C. A., where a number of Rock county boys are sojourning. He will be at the camp until the middle of the next period, when he will leave for Camp Manitowish for the remainder of the summer.

The last visit of the professor to Phantom was in 1918-19. He has rendered efficient assistance in aiding the boys study nature and astronomy.

The Phantom "Knocker," a four-page bi-monthly newspaper, has made its appearance in camp. It contains many interesting articles.

Stunt nights are popular at the camp. Each tent gives several or more stunts each evening such as a "boob contest" or the Dempsey-Carpenter fight.

The most popular organization at the camp is the "Benehead club." To belong a camper is required to do some foolish act, such as brushing his teeth with a whisk broom or using a comb as a fly-scraper. There are six members to date.

TEST FIRE ALARMS Fire alarm boxes in different parts of the city were being tested Monday to see that they were in proper shape.

PILGRIM PAGEANT ON AT PLYMOUTH

Historical Episodes Recalled by Great Celebration at Plymouth Rock.

Plymouth, Mass.—With the final dress rehearsal an unqualified success, the arrangements complete for lighting the immense "land-water" stage through the equivalent of 13,000 ordinary house lights, and the cast of 1,500 men, women and children tested perfect, the big scenes, the Plymouth pageant, "The Pilgrim Spirit," is ready for the premiere Wednesday.

The mammoth spectacle, the work of Prof. George F. Baker of Harvard university, will constitute the dramatic climax of a year of celebrations commemorating the landing of the Pilgrims Fathers 300 years ago.

America in Making. America in the making will be pictured by historic tableaux in what dramatic critics regard as a radical departure from the course of pageantry in this country.

Thorwald the Norseman, will enter the harbor in the prow of the galleon manned by sea rovers. In order will follow Martin Pring, Champlain, the stout Admiral Blok, Captain John Smith and Captain Thomas Hunt "Pilgrim adventures" whose journeys to these shores had a definite bearing upon the reception of the gallant which dared the perils of the Atlantic for 67 days in the tiny Mayflower. With the words of the Pilgrims' chorus by the striking John Alden, the comely Priscilla, Elder Brewster, Governor Carver, Bradford, Winslow and the others whose names are household words in every American home, will pass in review.

Will Play the Baby. The youngest "actor" in the cast is 3-months-old Helen Belcher, a direct descendant of Oceanus Hopkins, the baby born on the Mayflower and she will play the role of her ancestress in the production.

England and Holland will contribute much of the color of the pageant in relief to the dark costumes of the settlers. The royal progress of the arrogant James I and his retinue from Edinburgh to London is one of the most picturesque of the 20 larger scenes.

The Dutch scenes, in turn, stand in contrast with the life of persecution in England. The Pilgrims are shown in the hospitable Dutch cities, taking the resolution to continue their pilgrimage across the seas.

Practically all Plymouth not in the cast will attend the opening performance Wednesday evening which has been designated "Governor's Night" by the Pilgrim Tercentenary commission. Governors from each of the 48 states have been invited to attend this performance as well as the mayors of the 39 cities in Massachusetts. Governor Cox and the members of the commission will attend as a body, while the United States Pilgrim Tercentenary commission of which, President Harding is chairman, will be officially represented by a delegation of its members.

Following is a summary of the dramatic action as scheduled for the first performance.

The voice of Plymouth Rock strikes the motif of the pageant. A prologue of music especially composed for the occasion by Henry F. Gilbert ushers in Episode I, the Pilgrim adventures and their coming to Plymouth.

Eight scenes depict the arrival of the Norsemen, under Thorwald, 1000 A. D. Martin Pring in 1603, Champlain in 1605, Admiral Blok in 1611, Capt. Jeshu Smith in 1614, and the pestilence of 1618 and the landing of Capt. Thomas Dermer.

Episode II opens with the foreboding of the Pilgrims near Sturton-le-peper, England, in 1523. The martyrs of the cause next in Fleet prison, London, on the night of April 5, 1534. Scene 3 in this episode is the colorful royal progress of King James I, with special music for the march by Edward Burlingame Hill and the famous "harrying chorus" by Edgar Sullivan-Kelley, a descendant of Gov. Bradford. Hermann Hagedorn has written the words of the chorus.

Pilgrims in Holland. This episode of the beginnings of the movement in England concludes with the Pilgrim Fathers at Scrooby and at Rotterdamterhaven, on the east coast of England in the summer of 1608.

Life in the hospitable Dutch cities is shown in Episode III. The march of the Dutch cities of charity is set to the music of Frederick Converse and leads up to the decision to set sail for New England and the actual departure at Delftshaven.

In this last scene is by Leo Sowerby with the words of the Pilgrims' chorus by Edwin Arlington Robinson. A musical interlude, "The Voyage to the New World," by Chalmers Clifton, musical director of the pageant, guides the way to the arrival of the Pilgrims off the sandy shores of Cape Cod.

The compact in the cabin of the Mayflower ushers in Episode IV, the Pilgrims in America. The landing at Provincetown, November 26, 1620, has been very ably done with a song for the Pilgrim women by Josephine Preston Peabody to the score of Georges Chadwick.

The arrival and debarkation at Plymouth has for an accompaniment MacDowell's "1620" with the "Hymn of Praise" by Mr. Hagedorn.

One of the finest touches of realism comes in the scene of the treaty with the Indians which precedes the return of the Mayflower to the harbor. The arrival of new colonists, "The Immigration problem of 1620," pictures the daily life in the colony and terminates in the trial of Lyford and Olden.

And an anthem by Arthur Foote for the words of William Bradford, the finale shows America of today and passes on the message—"The path of the Mayflower must be kept open."

Subsequent performances of this pageant are scheduled for July 14, 15 and 16; July 30, August 1, 2 and 3; and August 10, 11, 12 and 13—dates set by lunar and tidal conditions controlling the moving phases of the pageant.
